Down to two

The leadership race in the U.K’s ruling Conserva tive Party has been reduced to two candidates, with Boris Johnson and Jeremy Hunt as the final contenders for the top post. The current Foreign Secretary, Jeremy Hunt, is a moder niser and a proponent of the Brexit deal, while Boris Johnson is a more intransigent and controversial figure. After more than 100,000 members of the party signed a petition calling for a second Brexit referendum, Johnson resigned as Foreign Secretary.

Children from the community

For the Dawoodi Bohra community across the country, Eid is not only a time of celebration and festivities, but also a time to show compassion and share pleasures with the less fortunate. Keeping this in mind, the Dawoodi Bohra community flagged off a nationwide food donation drive, led by children from Ahmedabad, their native town.

The children, who have already conducted several outreach initiatives, and brought to the fore values of generosity and humanity, are from the community's spiritual leader, His Holiness Dr. Syedna Muhammed Burhanuddin. The food donation drive was led by children of the community who, through their efforts, want to inculcate the same values in our children. We are raised to be generous and selfless, and as mothers, we want to inculcate the same values in our children. We want to make sure that our children know how to do as much as they can to spread compassion and kindness among the less fortunate.

Admitting that Facebook cannot take fake news on its own, its CEO Mark Zuckerberg said during CES that the only way to stop “deepfakes” videos is to make it so easy for people to do the right thing. He also said that Facebook has kept aside $3 billion, anticipating a potential FTC related to the “Deepfakes” videos.

“Is it manipulated media? Is it deepfakes we are talking about? Is it AI that makes someone say something that they didn’t say? I think that probably a pretty reasonable definition. But it’s an interesting conversation that’s cut in two ways that someone thinks is misleading. The problem is that if people have done TV interviews that have been cut in a way that they didn’t expect to happen, then it changes the definition of what are real TV interviews,” Zuckerberg said.

On the regulation side, he said that “whether the regulation comes in the form of administrative process or legislation— or in the form of what businesses do—is still up in the air.”

Facebook has kept aside $3 billion, anticipating a potential FTC related to the “Deepfakes” videos.

Zuckerberg is considered the giant with over two billion users and over two billion followers. He said that while Facebook does have its flaws, it has also contributed to a mental health crisis among adults and help fend off serious psychological distress such as depression and anxiety.

“Because until now, adults are 63 per cent less likely to feel sad, and are 70 per cent less likely to feel lonely compared with users who are not on social media,” he said during the “Aspen Ideas” festival.

Zuckerberg said: “Whether you agree with Facebook or not, I think that as a society, we have a right to ask: ‘Where do we go from here?’”

The social networking giant has seen its fair share of criticism and scrutiny, especially since Facebook’s role in the 2016 US presidential election. “I don’t think that as a society, we’ve past the point where it is reasonable to ask that question,” he said.

“It’s a really serious question, but I don’t think that that’s going to be the final word in making these decisions,” Zuckerberg said.

Regarding the future of Facebook, he said that while Facebook is trying to say, “We need to talk about truths and lies.”

China if the two countries are to move forward, Beijing said, adding that in exchange for China opening up its market, the US would impose "very substantial" tariffs on China if the two countries are unable to reach a deal. In that case, the US would open its doors to Chinese citizens. The US government knows "what it has to do to get a proper documentations that the US will use to pay the tariff," Trump said.

"Companies are under no obligation to do business with China, and the US has the right to take back the United States because the Chinese are using their\' power to impose the\' tariff," Trump said.

Benefiting from the tariffs, improved on China's export, because in China we are selling in China, we have not seen in 10 years a 10% dividend that I haven't taxed yet and the US is not putting any tariffs on, the US is just putting tariffs on China, Trump said.

"This is a very simple process, and it will not take long to do it, and we will not do it, but if we don't make a deal, the US will do it.

"In order to have an open line, the US will do it. We know how to deal with China, and the US would like to have a win-win situation on this issue. IPO of A Bi Infrabuilt opens today

Amid the boom in the real estate sector, A Bi Infrabuilt, the real estate arm of A Bi group, is set to hit the market with its initial public offering (IPO). The company, which has been listed on the National Stock Exchange, has set the price band for the offer at Rs 15.60-18 per share. The offer includes an offer for public subscription and an offer for allotment to employees.

South Korea is the sixth largest market for Amazon, and the company has been looking to establish a foothold in the country with its e-commerce platform. The retail giant has been investing heavily in South Korea, where it has set up a number of fulfillment centers and distribution centers.

Amazon's strong showing in South Korea is likely to put pressure on local retailers and e-commerce players, who have been struggling to compete with the giant. The company's presence in South Korea also highlights its global ambitions, as it continues to expand its reach across the world.

The company is also looking to expand its reach in other countries, and has been making moves in recent months to enter new markets. In addition to South Korea, Amazon has recently launched its e-commerce platform in India and the United Kingdom, and has also been expanding its presence in the Middle East.

Amazon's entry into South Korea is likely to be a significant development in the country's e-commerce landscape, and is sure to have implications for the local retail industry. It remains to be seen how the company will fare in the country, and whether it will be able to establish a strong foothold in the market.

With a strong presence in the United States and Europe, Amazon is well positioned to take on the competition in South Korea. However, it will need to be careful to avoid the pitfalls that other companies have faced when entering new markets.

The company has a strong track record of innovation and expansion, and is likely to bring a fresh perspective to the South Korean market. With its deep pockets and global reach, Amazon is well equipped to make significant investments in the country, and is likely to be a force to be reckoned with in the coming years.

The company's entry into South Korea is likely to be a significant development in the country's e-commerce landscape, and is sure to have implications for the local retail industry.
